Ginnie, Aaron Morgan, and I all were saddened at Bryce's passing. We pray for your family at this time of great testing. But, as Aaron said to us, Bryce is now HOME and does not hurt any more. That is the great blessing that keeps us going and looking forward to that great reunion!

We will continue to pray for you and for Heavenly Father to impart his wisdom during this time of great sorrow that will be comforting to all of you.

No death is pleasant, and the death of a child is especially difficult to comprehend. May the God who knows how to save us out of all our tribulations comfort and guide you through this difficult time, and may you find comfort in His promise of a better world (Isaiah 25:8).

Dear family and friends of Bryce -

My heart breaks with yours as you go through this valley. As difficult as it can be sometimes to understand why things happen, we cling to the promise that God is in control. Prayers were answered - Bryce has been healed and will never again know suffering. While we had hoped for healing on this side of heaven we take comfort in knowing that Bryce sits in the lap of Jesus. May God grant you healing and His peace - that goes beyond human understanding. May you cling to the hope that is found in Jesus and joyfully wait with anticipation your reunion in heaven.

In Christ,

Joel Dietrich
