“ Grant was always a friendly and warm person from the day I began at Chick-fil-A in 1998. Every interaction with him was positive and he surely lived the corporate purpose. He was a great friend. May his memory never be forgotten and his eternity filled with joy and peace. We'll be praying for the family during this time of loss and grief.

“ Grant Boyd was my first “boss” at the Home Office. Grant oversaw all aspects of Home Office facilities management, and was the trusted right-hand man of the VP of Administration. Our mantra under Grant’s leadership was to “serve others better than we would want ourselves or our loved ones to be treated.” Grant wasn’t interested in clawing his way up the ladder, or in making a name for himself, and most had no idea of the many things Grant was doing behind the scenes to help others. He empowered his team with wide latitude to deliver remarkable service by implicitly trusting us to “own” our work, pursue interests, develop skills, and determine best practices. He would say that we weren’t hired to be “managed,” but rather we were hired because we were capable and trustworthy. Grant inspired us to be our very best.

Some years ago while at work one day, I got a call that my grandmother had a major stroke and was being transported to the hospital in Dublin. I told Grant about it, and without hesitation he told me to go be with her as long as needed. Not only did he assure my work responsibilities would be covered, but he gave me the keys to his own vehicle to drive down there (I had recently had an issue with my car and Grant anticipated my needs). Grant was a gentleman and a Christian—a genuine role model for servant leadership. I thank God for Grant Boyd.
