“ Mickey was a very good friend to my husband, Johnny Pitts and me, when he owned an auto parts store in Hollywood Rd. In Atlanta. He was single then, and would often come to eat with us after he got off work. I remember when he met Marie, and eventually they married. I am sorry to hear that he passed. He was a good friend.

“ Another porch rocking chair now sits empty at the corner of Campaign Trail and Colonial Court. You could always count on a big smile and wave from Mickey and Marie when walking the Villages neighborhood. One of the original homeowners who helped set the standards for this new way of life offered to Fayetteville residents, Mickey’s example helped guide his neighbors to become civically aware as The Villages evolved into what it has become today. I have no doubt that Angel and Marie greeted him with open arms when he entered the pearly gates of heaven. RIP all, you will be missed.
